Corporate Diligence

M&A due diligence

You need to provide accurate, invaluable information and your client needs this information about the target as quickly as possible. Using Corporate Diligence with its structured checklists and risk tracking system means that decision-making can begin early in the process.

Issues are easily identified and visible to the team and the client can see progress as it happens.

The faster your client receives the result of due diligence the better placed they are to make that decision.

- ✓ Faster decision making for your clients
- ✓ Check lists configured by practise area
- ✓ Immediate visibility of risks as they are identified
- ✓ Automatic generation of due diligence reports
- ✓ Enhanced collaboration between partner and client
- ✓ Web-based system for global access
- ✓ Increased efficiency of corporate partner resources

Corporate Diligence is a real-time, online system for managing, collecting, checking and publishing due diligence reports. Issues are immediately highlighted and real-time information is available to any authorised user.

A major leap forward

Does a due diligence engagement mean version tracking, document creation and formatting? Does it mean a lot of time is spent formatting the report, and does it mean that the report needs to be constantly reshuffled to present the data in a way the client needs? Corporate Diligence uses innovative technology to automate report management and creation which means your team can concentrate on what they do best.

Immediate visibility of risks and Issues

Using Corporate Diligence, risks and issues are identified and flagged immediately. This visibility offers unparalleled information about the exercise as it progresses and means that risks and potential liabilities can be assessed early in the process.

Configurable due diligence check lists by practise area

Corporate Diligence is designed to mirror your practice and delivers an intuitive experience for the team and the client. Practice areas can clearly see the sections that they need to complete. Each section is tailored to reflect how your organisation operates best and because the information is recorded in a uniform way creating reports is quick and simple

Automatic generation of due diligence reports and interim reports

Through the structured collection of information, generating interim reports throughout the due diligence process is simple. A click of the mouse and Corporate Diligence gathers the data that has been recorded and formats the information in a way that meets your standards. The end result is a report that is easy to read, with the risks and potential liabilities presented in a structured way. Financial data can be presented graphically and risks ordered in a chart format.

Enhanced collaboration between Partner and Client

Engage with your clients more than ever before; Corporate Diligence uses role based security to access the system which enables you to control who sees what information. The client can be granted access so they are kept involved with the due diligence exercise as it happens. Corporate Diligence supports attachments enabling key documents to be added and viewable to the whole team including the client.

Fast and accurate delivery

Time is everything and when that opportunity strikes, using Corporate Diligence to collate, share and create reports that enable faster decision making will be a great advantage. Collected data, summaries, risks and all associated valuable notes are visible to others immediately and with a click of the mouse or a prod of the finger for Tablet users, the Corporate Diligence system will build the document, formatted and presented to your corporate standards.

Interim reports can be created as often as necessary and because the data is stored electronically reports can contain any of the information recorded during the project.

With online access, your partners and clients can access and update information from anywhere in the world through a secure, internet connection.

Client Access

Working together means a faster turnaround

Access can also be given to clients so that certain data can be entered directly, or read only means they can watch the work in progress. The client will have immediate access to risks and issues as they are identified placing them in a unique position to make early decisions.

What now....?

Going live with Corporate Diligence is a simple process.

Our Corporate Diligence Project Managers will take you through the steps that will be the most efficient for your organisation and ensures the system is configured to meet your practice processes.

We use proven project methodologies to deliver a system that meets your needs, even down to the colours and your company logo.

Security

What about security?

You expect the highest levels of security and you will not be disappointed. Deploying data encryption at every touch point with authentication known as triple factor means Corporate Diligence is a highly secure system and Software Europe is certified with ISO/IEC 27001:2005, a security system that is independently audited.

The service you expect

We realise that every organisation is different and as such Software Europe provide a number of options, a mix-and-match support service means that you can use your own internal skills when appropriate, or we can provide everything you need.

Our Service Desk provides the support you need during time-critical projects and our range of support packages include international and around-the-clock options.

“An early view of the risk list means that our clients can begin to examine their decisions at the earliest opportunity and considerations can be made about alleviating those risks”

Corporate Diligence is very easy to use and intuitive; we can also provide various training options including walk-through videos in any language. With many years' experience delivering services over the internet you can be confident that our exceptional service will be experienced throughout your organisation, providing your clients with a competitive advantage and innovative approach to delivering due diligence projects.
